THE RECORDS MANAGEMENT DIVISION

The Records Management Division, with ☐ full-time positions, comprises three branches: The Records Systems Branch, the Information Technology Branch, and the Archives and Records Center Branch. ☐

The division through these components directs the Agency Records Management Program. This is an active program covering the life cycle of records from creation, through their maintenance as active files, to their final disposition either through destruction or preservation as archival materials. The Agency Records Management Program provides for effective controls over the creation, maintenance and use, and disposition of all Agency records; develops and encourages the application of standards, procedures, and techniques designed to improve the management of records; ensures the maintenance and security of records of permanent value; and facilitates the segregation and disposal of records of temporary value. ☐

The records management function as carried out by the Records Management Division is important because records creation and maintenance consume significant portions of salaries, space, and equipment allocated to administrative activities within the Agency. A well run program is necessary to safeguard essential records and will conserve office space, money, materials, and manpower. Moreover, an effective records management program is required by law. ☐

The Records Systems Branch, with eight positions, provides guidance and assistance to Agency components on records management matters and develops standards, procedures, and techniques that apply to the life

Additionally, the branch is responsible for the Agency classification program, as required by Executive Order 12065, and for programs relating to reports and forms management, records equipment, vital records, correspondence, and records management training. ☐

The Information Technology Branch, with ☐ positions, manages the Agency micrographics program and supports the records management function through a computer-based management information system. In the micrographics area, the branch coordinates technical developments with Agency components, assists in developing new applications, and maintains an equipment and applications inventory. In the automated systems area, the branch also provides assistance to the Information Services Staff in the application of information technology to solve records management problems, and performs systems analysis of office automation programs with emphasis on records systems. ☐

The Archives and Records Center Branch, with ☐ positions, provides for the economical storage of records not currently active but retained for future use and for ultimate destruction or transfer to the National Archives. This function frees high-cost office space for other utilization, provides better care and control of inactive records, and preserves records of permanent value. The branch comprises the Accessioning Section, Reference Section, and the Disposition and Archives Section which together carry out the branch's function. The total capacity of the records center is 133,500 cubic feet of materials. ☐
